QUARTEX™

How to Play

Quartex is an engaging new abstract strategy tile game for the whole family. It's a board game and puzzle in one.

Play a tile by placing and matching it beside other tiles already in play. If your tile completes a four-corner shape, you earn a point token of that color.

However, here's the fun twist – as the number of tokens collected increases, their value decreases. This unique scoring system adds depth and strategy to this thought-provoking puzzle game.

Because players decide where tiles are placed, the shape of every game of Quartex is unique! If you are ready to outsmart the competition in this challenging game of shape-building, grab a few friends and enter the Quartex!

"I had the pleasure of learning this from the designer… ranks up there with Blokus and Qwirkle."
– SubtlyArtistic

"The ever changing value of the scoring tokens creates many tough in-game scoring choices, and allows for some good comeback wins. Quartex is nice in that it plays for two-to-five players, so has good versatility in that regard, and a rule set which is simple enough to learn quickly, yet the game plays with its share of decisions to make which can truly influence a player's ultimate fate."
– Calvin Daniels, journalist, critic

Quartex Gets a Thumbs Up from Mensa

July 5th, 2013

Quartex, a new board game from Canadian inventor Tim W. K. Brown, recently received a "recommended" rating from American Mensa, an organization whose members boast IQs in the top two percent of North America's population.

The game, which was launched by Burlington, Ontario's CSE Games Inc. in Q4 2012, got the much-deserved nod of approval after Mensa members played the title at their annual Mind Games® competition, held earlier this spring in St. Louis, Missouri.

Each year, usually in late April, Mensa members get together for three days of intense play, evaluating a wide variety of new-to-market board and card games submitted by manufacturers and designers from around the world.

Mensa member-players have a reputation for picking winners. In the past, many of the games, which have received a "thumbs up" from competitors, have gone on

Del Rio welcomed about 30 friends and fans to S & L for some hands-on
